

BIOGRAPHY

Simon Pastucha
Head of the Urban Design Studio
Los Angeles Department of City Planning

Simon Pastucha is an Urban Designer and currently heads the Urban Design Studio of the Los Angeles Department of City Planning. Simon graduated from California State Polytechnic University Pomona with a degree in Landscape Architecture with an emphasis on ecosystematic design and regenerative studies. He has reviewed and improved the design of major planning, transportation, and neighborhood projects with a total value in the hundreds of billions of dollars. Simon sits as a Commissioner of the Marina Del Rey Design Control Board where design standards are set for the community. Simon has been a Lecturer at several major US Universities, most recently at the University of Southern California (USC), Cornell, and University of California Los Angeles (UCLA).